Ava joins her mysterious family to save her father from the fearful dangers in the magical Realm of Fae.

The Golden Hind was a beautiful ship, elegant, detailed and proud. Tarran was already the tour guide.

"It was originally called the Pelican but was renamed by Drake in honour of his patron Sir Christopher Hatton, whose crest was the golden hind. A female red deer.

"The red deer is also a symbol of the Fae. Is that not true George?" Ava asked. Her studies of her father's book were paying off.

"Everything in nature is Fae in some form," he said, perhaps a touch sharply.

"Everything in nature is to be respected," said Lexi, "and has deeper meaning."
